

Marco Grgurevic-Pujana

Marco Grgurevic-Pujana serves as the Managing Vice President of Minority Business Growth for the Equity & Inclusion team at the Greater Cleveland Partnership (GCP). In this role, he leads statewide and regional initiatives designed to accelerate the growth of high-potential minority-owned businesses. His work focuses on strengthening access to capital, corporate supply chains, strategic networks, and technical resources, ensuring that diverse entrepreneurs have the tools and opportunities needed to scale sustainably and compete in broader markets.

With a career spanning economic development, micro-finance, business development, marketing, and advertising, Marco brings a multidisciplinary perspective to advancing inclusive economic growth. He has worked closely with entrepreneurs at various stages of development, helping them refine strategy, access funding, expand market reach, and build operational capacity. His background enables him to bridge the gap between business owners, institutional partners, and corporate stakeholders to drive measurable impact.

Marco's leadership is rooted in a commitment to fostering equitable access and long-term wealth creation within underrepresented communities. By aligning public, private, and nonprofit resources, he helps cultivate ecosystems where minority-owned enterprises can thrive and contribute meaningfully to regional economic vitality.

He holds an International MBA from Baldwin Wallace College, where he developed a global perspective on business strategy and economic development. Marco continues to champion innovation, collaboration, and inclusive growth across Ohio and beyond.
